2025 Keynote Speaker Presentations

Bob Iames – Conifers for Today’s Gardens

Conifers that change color? Conifers that require no pruning? Conifers for shady areas and difficult locations? Get ready to explore the versatile world of conifers. Join Bob Iames for an informative session where he’ll reveal the surprising variety of conifers that not only thrive in challenging spaces but also offer striking seasonal color changes and require minimal maintenance. You’ll discover exciting options for every corner of your landscape. Bob will share classic favorites and unusual new varieties, how to integrate them into your own gardens, and where to purchase them.

Charlie Nardozi – A New Look at Ecological Gardening and Companion Planting – <https://www.gardeningwithcharlie.com>

Many gardeners want to garden more in tune with Nature and use less pesticides, fertilizers and water. In this talk I’ll define ecological gardening and talk about ways to use these techniques to build better soil. I’ll discuss No Dig gardening methods and how this technique reduces weeding, watering and work in the garden while fostering a more diverse plant ecology. I also will talk about new research on companion planting offering new ways to plant vegetables, herbs and flowers together for nutrient sharing, space sharing, and insect, disease and weed controls.

Stacey Hirvela – Seeing Shrubs: A Celebration of the “Backbone of the Garden” – www.provenwinners.com/Stacey-Top-Shrubs

The word “shrub” doesn’t exactly inspire excitement. However, in context, shrubs encompass some of our most beloved – and useful – plants for gardening and landscaping. From abelia to weigela to new genera you’ve maybe never heard of before, we’ll explore the story behind new varieties and old favorites from Proven Winners ColorChoice Shrubs, how to grow them, and some inspiration for making them a part of your garden.

Susan Martin – An Insiders Guide to Buying the Best Plants – <https://www.facebook.com/gardenersuenews/>

Avid plant collector and industry veteran Susan Martin shares an insider’s perspective on how the supply chain works, which will help you see the plants you buy in a whole new light. You will leave with a better understanding of how to do good research before you buy, look for or avoid specific traits, decode tag language, pick the best plants off the retail bench, and much more. Attending this talk is the next best thing to having a plant pro come shopping with you.
